What is the Commonwealth Home Support Programme?

Funded by the Australian Government, the Commonwealth Home Support Programme provides a range of entry-level aged care services for older people who need assistance to keep living independently at home and in their community.

If you are generally able to manage but just need some help with daily tasks to continue living at home, Commonwealth Home Support Programme services may be right for you.

These services might also be suitable if you have had a setback and need support for just a short period of time to help you get back on your feet.

The Commonwealth Home Support Programme funds a large variety of organisations (called service providers) across Australia to deliver the care and services to you.

The aim of the program is to help older people live as independently as possible — with a focus on working with you, rather than doing for you. It is about building on your strengths and abilities to help you remain living independently and safely at home.

The program is for people aged 65 years and over (50 years and over for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people).

The program also includes support services for prematurely aged people on a low income who are 50 years or over (45 years or over for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people) and are homeless or at risk of homelessness.

Examples of Commonwealth Home Support Programme services

There are different services to help you manage your day-to-day activities. Depending on your needs, you may be eligible to receive:

- transport to appointments and activities
- domestic help (e.g. house cleaning, washing clothes)
- personal care (e.g. help with showering or dressing)
- home maintenance (e.g. changing light bulbs, gardening)
- home modifications (e.g. getting a grab rail installed)
- aids and equipment (e.g. bath seat, raised toilet seat, mobility aids)
- meals, food preparation, nutrition advice, cooking skills
- nursing (e.g. managing medication)
- allied health (e.g. podiatry, physiotherapy, occupational therapy)
- social support (e.g. accompanied activities, group excursions)
- respite (care for you while your carer takes a break).

How do I access Commonwealth Home Support Programme services?

This booklet outlines the usual pathway for people to access Commonwealth Home Support Programme services. It includes information on what to expect at each stage, as well as information for special circumstances and further assistance.

Manage your services

Call My Aged Care

My Aged Care has a website (www.myagedcare.gov.au) and contact centre to give you information about aged care and to help you access the services that are right for you.

You can phone the My Aged Care contact centre on 1800 200 422 between 8am and 8pm Monday to Friday and 10am to 2pm on Saturdays (your local time, no matter where in Australia you live).

My Aged Care staff will ask you questions about your current needs and circumstances so they can refer you to appropriate aged care assessment services. They might also create a personalised 'client record' for you. Your client record holds information about your needs, the results of any assessments you have had, plus any aged care services you receive.

If you live in Western Australia, there will be differences in the way you are assessed and referred to services. You should still call My Aged Care and the contact centre will explain the process and who you need to contact.

If you speak a language other than English, you can phone the Translating and Interpreting Service (TIS National) for the cost of a local call on 131 450. TIS National covers more than 100 languages. You can call TIS National and ask to be connected to My Aged Care. Or you can call My Aged Care and they can arrange an interpreter for you.

If you have a hearing or speech impairment, you can contact My Aged Care through the National Relay Service in two steps:

1. Go to the National Relay Service website (www.relayservice.gov.au) to choose your preferred access point or call them on 1800 555 677*.
2. Ask for My Aged Care on 1800 200 422*.

* Calls to 1800 numbers are free from fixed landlines and most Australian mobile phone providers now offer free calls to 1800 numbers – check with your mobile phone provider.

Have a home support assessment

If the My Aged Care contact centre refers you for a home support assessment, a Regional Assessment Service (RAS) assessor will contact you to arrange a face-to-face assessment in your home.

This assessment is provided free of charge.

During your home support assessment, the RAS assessor will ask you about your day-to-day activities, your needs and your preferences — what you can do well, what you need some help doing, and what you want to be able to do.

You may wish to have a family member, friend or carer at the assessment to support you, or to speak on your behalf.

If your assessment shows you are eligible for services under the Commonwealth Home Support Programme, you can work with the RAS assessor to decide which service provider(s) you want to receive services from.

If you have concerns about your home support assessment, try to speak to your RAS assessor in the first instance — it might be possible to get a resolution that way. The RAS organisations have complaint procedures in place and will work with you to address your concerns. If you and the RAS assessor cannot resolve the issue or you feel uncomfortable approaching them directly, you can call My Aged Care.

Agree on a home support plan

The RAS assessor will work with you to develop a personalised home support plan.

Your home support plan will be tailored to your needs, and will be developed to maximise your independence and quality of life.

Your RAS assessor might also suggest options for you that are not part of the Commonwealth Home Support Programme (e.g. local community services, groups and activities).

For example, your home support plan might include advice or referrals about:

- assistive devices or equipment to help you stay independent and safe in your home
- meals and food preparation
- transport to appointments, groups and activities to keep you connected with friends, services and the local community
- an exercise and/or daily activity program
- strategies to reduce falls.

Your home support plan should be reviewed by your service provider every 12 months, to ensure you are receiving services and supports that continue to be right for you.

Select service providers and work out your fees

To find out which service providers offer what you need in your area, ask your RAS assessor or call My Aged Care. You can also check the My Aged Care website — click on the ‘Find a service’ button.

Your RAS assessor can arrange to have a ‘referral for service’ sent to the relevant provider(s) in your local area. A referral for service notifies providers there is a new client wanting a service, and prompts them to contact you to make arrangements.

If you first want to visit or call a service provider to decide if their services are right for you, ask your RAS assessor to give you a ‘referral code’. You can pass this to the service provider when you speak with them. This allows them to view your client record, accept the referral and start organising services for you, if you choose to accept their services.

If there are no services available, you may be placed on a waitlist. Once services become available, people on the waitlist with the highest level of need will be offered services first.

Work out your fees

It is expected that you will contribute towards the cost of the services you receive, if you can afford to do so.

You will not be asked to cover the full cost of services — the Australian Government subsidises Commonwealth Home Support Programme service providers so that client fees can be kept to a reasonable and affordable level.

Any fees you are asked to pay will be agreed between you and the service provider before you start receiving services.

How are your fees worked out?

Each service provider is required to have their own client contribution policy and will use it to determine your fees. Service providers are expected to make their client contribution policy publicly available. You can ask your service provider to give you a copy of theirs.

To work out your fees, your service provider will consider the information you supplied during your home support assessment (with the RAS assessor) and may ask you questions about your financial situation. They will take into account your ability to pay and the number and type of services you are seeking.

When do you find out what you're expected to pay?

Service providers should discuss and agree contribution amounts with you before you start receiving services.

What if you can't afford the fees?

Talk to your service provider about the services you will receive and how much you'll be asked to contribute for each of them. Arrangements for clients who are unable to pay the requested contribution will be discussed before any services begin.

You will not be denied services if you are unable to contribute to the cost. Service providers will have their own arrangements for protecting those least able to contribute towards the cost of their care.

You have a right to appeal the amount you have been asked to pay. If you wish to question your fees, you should first discuss this with your service provider.

Will your contribution affect your age pension?

Your age pension will not be affected by the contributions you make towards the cost of your services.

Where can you get financial advice?

If you want basic information about managing your finances, you can use Centrelink's free Financial Information Service. This confidential service can help you make informed decisions about investment and financial issues for your current and future needs. To find out more, call Centrelink on 132 300.

Manage your services

What can you expect from service providers?

Commonwealth Home Support Programme service providers are expected to help support you to do as much as you can, and help improve your quality of life.

They will help you to live as independently as possible by focusing on your needs and preferences, and building on your strengths.

They should provide services tailored to your unique circumstances, working in partnership with you, your family, friends and carers.

Service providers should review your services every 12 months to make sure they continue to meet your needs.

What happens if your care needs change?

If your needs change over time, you can discuss this with your service provider. They may refer you to My Aged Care for another assessment.

You can also call My Aged Care directly to discuss your changing care needs.

If your care needs increase or become more complex, you may need new services or a different type of aged care, such as a Home Care Package. Call My Aged Care to arrange an appropriate assessment, either with a Regional Assessment Service (RAS) or with an Aged Care Assessment Team (ACAT). Once there's a clear picture of what your new needs are, you will be given options about the care and services best suited to you.

Can you change providers? What if you move to another location?

You should talk to your service provider(s) in the first instance, who will refer you back to My Aged Care. You can also choose to contact My Aged Care directly to talk about your needs. Depending on your circumstances, you may be required to have another assessment.

What happens if you go into hospital?

Speak to your Commonwealth Home Support Programme service provider(s) to let them know, so your services can be suspended while you're away from home.

You may be able to receive additional Commonwealth Home Support Programme services for a short period of time to help you get back on your feet after you return home. Speak to your service provider(s) in the first instance.

If your needs have changed significantly, your services might need to change as well. Or perhaps another type of aged care might now be more appropriate. You might need another assessment to find out what is best for you and to make sure all your needs are being met. Your Commonwealth Home Support Programme service provider might request an assessment for you or you can call My Aged Care directly to find out more.

You might also be eligible for help from the Transition Care Program, which provides short-term support for older people after a hospital stay. To access transition care services, you must be assessed by an Aged Care Assessment Team (ACAT) while you are in hospital. Your hospital can assist you with this, or you can call My Aged Care.

What are your legal rights and responsibilities?

To make sure you receive quality care, the Charter of Care Recipients' Rights and Responsibilities for Home Care sets out principles for how you and your service provider should work together.

Your service provider should deliver your services in a way that meets the Home Care Standards.

You can ask for copies of these documents from your service provider.

For help understanding your rights and responsibilities, contact My Aged Care.

Raising your concerns

Concerns about the services you are receiving

If you have a problem with a service, try to talk with your service provider first. It may be something that can be resolved easily.

Your service provider should tell you about their internal complaints handling process and how to make a complaint. You have the right to make a complaint without it affecting your care and services.

Sometimes complaints cannot be resolved by the service provider, or you might not feel comfortable raising your concern with them.

Another way to raise your concerns or make a complaint

You are also able to make a complaint to the Aged Care Complaints Commissioner (a free service) in the following ways:

- website — www.agedcarecomplaints.gov.au
- telephone — call 1800 550 552
- in writing — address your written complaint to:

Aged Care Complaints Commissioner
Department of Health
GPO Box 9848 (Your capital city and state/territory)

Getting help from an advocate (someone who can help you raise your concerns)

If you want help to raise your concern, you can have an advocate work with you to resolve the matter. The Australian Government funds advocacy services under the National Aged Care Advocacy Program. Advocacy services provide information to older people, their families and carers about their rights and responsibilities when accessing aged care services. Advocacy services are free, confidential and independent. The National Aged Care Advocacy Line can be contacted on 1800 700 600 (free call).

Further assistance

What help is available for people with dementia?

The Australian Government expects all aged care providers to offer services that meet the needs of people with dementia.

The Australian Government funds advisory services, education and training, support programs and other services for people with dementia, their families and carers. Commonwealth Home Support Programme clients can access these supports.

For more information call My Aged Care on 1800 200 422 or go to www.myagedcare.gov.au

What help is available for older people who are homeless or at risk of becoming homeless?

If you are prematurely aged, on a low income, are 50 years or over (45 years or over for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people) and are homeless or at risk of homelessness, there are supports including:

- links to appropriate housing and care services
- advocacy and assistance with financial and legal work
- links to other social support services aimed at reducing homelessness.

What help is available for people with diverse needs?

The Australian Government recognises that our society is diverse and people have a wide range of life experiences.

Many programs and services are available to support people with diverse needs to access the help they need. Specialised services may exist in your area that cater specifically to special needs groups. You can find out more through My Aged Care or by asking your RAS assessor.

Service providers should consider, respect and support specific and diverse needs when delivering care and services. No service provider should discriminate against anyone, including:

- Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples
- people from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds
- people who live in a rural and remote area
- people who are financially or socially disadvantaged
- veterans
- people who are homeless or at risk of becoming homeless
- people who are lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender or intersex
- people who are Care Leavers (adults who spent time in institutional care as a child)
- parents separated from their children by forced adoption or removal.

For more information call My Aged Care on 1800 200 422 or go to www.myagedcare.gov.au

What if you need assistance with interpreting?

Service providers are able to access the Australian Government funded Translating and Interpreting Service (TIS National) to help them manage aged care services to people from non-English speaking backgrounds.

TIS National provides in-person and over-the-phone interpreting services to Australian Government funded aged care providers at no cost to you or your provider. If you speak a language other than English, you can phone TIS National for the cost of a local call on 131 450. TIS National covers more than 100 languages.

What assistance is available for your carer?

If your carer is in need of additional support, contact the Carer Gateway on 1800 422 737 or go to the website at www.carergateway.gov.au to find out more.
